

Jerri Warren

Speech and Communication

EXERCISE #4 THE INTRODUCTION

Practice the following scenarios and do the intros. Make sure you tell something about the second person named.

You are with your grandmother and you run into a friend. (I don't care if you like your friend more, older age is an achievement and should get the first reference, as should family relationship)

You are with a friend and run into your boss. (If you want to score points with your boss, I would say his/her name first)

You are at a parent/teacher conference and you have to make the introductions.

You are at work and your significant other comes to visit. Introduce a colleague.

You have a friend over to work on a school project in your home and you introduce your family.

You bring your grandmother to church and you introduce her to the pastor.

You introduce your husband to your doctor.

You introduce your friend to Nobel laureate, Dr. Solbrig.

You are with your boyfriend and you run into your ex-boyfriend. (Be careful)

Why? You should never exclude someone from a conversation by not taking the time to properly introduce.